ANNEX A

THE HON ANNA PLOWDEN CBE

Anna graduated from the Institute of Archaeology in 1963 and was then awarded a fellowship by the British School of Archaeology in Baghdad where she worked on the conservation of ivories discovered at Nimrud.

In 1966 she started her conservation company which was the first to bring modern scientific methods into the commercial sector. She specialised in the cleaning of excavated bronze statues using an ethical painstaking method carried out under a microscope, rather than the then popular method of chemical stripping. She felt strongly that scientific knowledge should be balanced with practical skills and an aesthetic awareness.

By 1969 she had established close links with another commercial conservator, Peter Smith. This allowed her to expand her range from archaeological and fine art objects to include metal, stonework and organic materials. The two companies formally combined in 1985 as Plowden & Smith Ltd. Anna's focus was always the conservation of antique, fine and applied art objects and decorative ornament, rather than constructional or building fabric conservation. This distinction is sometimes described as the conservation of movable objects rather than immovable structures.

Alongside the work carried out in the workshop on smaller, individual objects, Anna encouraged the Company to carry out a range of larger projects that have included;

- The cleaning and decontamination of the earliest 27,500 Acts of Parliament.
- The production and installation of mounts and fittings to display the Crown Jewels in the Tower of London.
- The research and establishment of a new method of conserving ancient, waterlogged lacquer objects.
- Disaster recovery of items from fire and flood including work at Hampton Court Palace and Windsor Castle.

Some of the appointments held during her career include, Trustee of the Victoria & Albert Museum, Trustee of the Edward James Foundation (responsible for West Dean College), Chairman of the Conservation Committee of the Crafts Council, Member of the Museums and Galleries Commission Conservation Advisory Committee, Member of the Council of the Textile Conservation Centre.

She played an active and passionate part in the development of the conservation profession and campaigned for accreditation, proper training for conservators, the use of trained conservators on public projects, and fair competitive tendering practices.

Plowden & Smith Ltd held Royal Warrants of Appointment to HM The Queen and to HM Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother as Restorers of Fine Art Objects. Anna was a member of the Council of the Royal Warrant Holders Association and a founding Trustee of the Association's charity The Queen Elizabeth Scholarship Trust.

She was appointed CBE in 1997 for her services to conservation.
